President's Corner

Howdy shipmates, Another Breeze ready to publish with all the latest news from your Association.

First, in this issue of the Breeze you will find the details for the upcoming reunion in Norfolk, including the menu for our banquet, available tours, and hotel information. You'll also find the registration form. The cutoff date is September 15, 2022, so make your reservations ASAP.

One thing I must point out is that we board the Friday night dinner cruise behind the hotel, which is about a 150-yard walk. Be sure and let me know if you want to take this tour and need assistance. The charge would have been $125.00 to furnish transportation for this short walk.

As you all know, I have been looking for someone take over the Ship Store but have had no takers as of today. As with the cost of everything else recently, the price list

Norfolk, Virginia 2022 Annual Reunion Tours!

Thursday, October 6, 2022 Naval Station Norfolk/ Nauticus

The Hampton Roads area is home to military bases from all branches of the military, and Naval Station Norfolk is the world's largest naval facility.

Your visit will begin with a security screening at the visitors center and include a driving tour of Admiral's Row, the Naval Air Station, and the piers. Following the tour, you will have time to enjoy lunch at Norfolk's MacArthur center which is home to more than 20 restaurants. There will be a wide range of food choices at a broad price range.

After lunch our tour heads downtown to Nauticus, an exciting 120,000 square-foot science and technology center that explores the power of the sea with interactive and educational exhibits. On the second deck of Nauticus is the Hampton Roads Naval Museum, which features a large collection of seafaring artwork, ship models and underwater artifacts.

Also part of Nauticus is the USS Wisconsin. The Wisconsin is one of the largest and last battleships to be built by the U.S. Navy.

Note: If for any reason the naval base is closed to the public (e.g. security issues), the tour length will be shortened, but refunds can't be issued.

Due to heightened security, participants may be searched and a photo ID is required. Sharp objects such as pocket knives and nail clippers are not permitted on base.

Protecting the Air.

The U.S.S. Coral Sea was by this time designated CVA-43 and headed back to the states from Mediterranean Waters. During our trip we encountered a hurricane which caused extensive damage to the ship. We had to return to the Portsmouth, Va., Naval Shipyard for repairs.

Some of the crew took leave and those who remained on board maintained routine daily duties and enjoyed Port and Starboard Liberty. The shipyard workers were working everyday around the clock.

One morning, around 02:00 hours, a loud rat-a-tat noise started echoing throughout the ship. No one could sleep, and this went on for quite a while. The crew was really getting angry, and a few hands volunteered to search for the air lines that operated the steel chippers. In about a half-hour, things were nice and quiet again, and we thought that was the end of it. As we all got comfortable in our racks, the steel chippers were back in action. A few more volunteered to seek and destroy; this time it would be the main supply line. In about twenty minutes the chippers went silent, and all hands thought that would be the end of it. After getting used to the quiet, the barrage began again.

By now the crew was out for blood, so out went the third attack party. This time they were surprised to find the marines from our own ship standing guard. The men were told that anyone caught disrupting this work in any way would be shot!

The chippers went at it again, but only for a short time. Ah, peace and quiet. Repairs were finally completed, and the Coral Sea was under way for a shake-down cruise to Guantanamo Bay during March and April of 1954. All's well that ends well.

Secretary's Corner

Greetings Shipmates, Here's hoping that your holiday season went well.

Not much new to report except that I'm working on organizing a Spring Fling for 2023. I'm looking for a suitable site near the middle of Indiana, closer to those of you who may want to attend this event.

I'm open to suggestions, and I'd like to get a firm commitment from at least 40 Shipmates and their guests before I make a commitment to any facility. Once again, if any of you are interested in attending a Spring Fling next year, please let me know. My contact information is on the Officer's listing in this issue.

As always, I enjoy hearing from you. Also, please don't forget to look at the address label and see if your dues are current. Please contact me if you have any questions or concerns.

Godspeed!

Treasurer's Corner

Greetings, I'm experiencing winter doldrums. Woke up to 1 deg. outside this morning. There are better things to come, like the annual reunion in Norfolk.

Nothing new financially to report. The annual $1,000.00 donation to the US Naval Sea Cadets, Coral Sea Division, has been mailed and dues are coming in. It's raffle ticket time again. You should have received three books of tickets in your Sea Breeze. I hope we have a better return than last year--which was a record year--thanks in no small part to Larry and Ruth Carlson selling more than 100 books! Please consider participating in this fund raiser. If you would like to purchase extra tickets, just include the extra money and I will fill them out. I have not included any pictures of the memorabilia trailer as health issues and cold weather have delayed having the graphics done. I'll include some in the June issue.

Be Well, stay safe, see you in Norfolk,

Captain's Mast.

After completing a tour of duty in the Mediterranean, the USS Coral Sea CVB43 was sent to the Portsmouth, Va., Navy Shipyard for a few minor repairs. This situation allowed eligible crewmen to take leave for a week or two, leaving the ship with a skeleton crew. I was not in service long enough to have leave, so I had to stay onboard.

Since the Marine detachment also left the ship, some of their usual obligations had to be covered, including "Captain's Orderly". As the luck of the Irish would have it, I was selected and after about two weeks I adapted to my new duties.

One afternoon I was informed there was going to be a "Captain's Mast" and I would be accompanying him to this event. I reported to the Captain's Cabin, and we went to a meeting room where five sailors were lined up. The captain read off the charges so all could hear. He then walked up to the five sailors and asked each man if he was gambling. The first four men said yes. But he asked the fifth sailor, whose name the captain knew, "Willie Jones, don't tell me you were gambling?" Willie responded, "No sir, Captain sir, not me. I was just fading."

Well, the Captain almost busted a gut to keep from laughing. His punishment dealt out to the five men

Chaplain's Corner

Dear Shipmates,
I don't know about you, but as I grow older - and it seems like "older" is coming way sooner than I would like - I more and more reminisce about my experiences earlier in my life. Many of those memories come from my days onboard our "Ageless Warrior," USS CORAL SEA (1986-1989).

I remember, for one, our General Quarters drills. As a chaplain, of course, I did not have a Repair Locker assignment, but, rather, my station was the Battle Dressing Station just below the flight deck. Our manning included corpsmen, a flight surgeon, a dental officer, and me. We got to be very good friends as the minutes lengthened to hours spent together in that rather small space.

It was hot in there. Air did not seem to be moving and, of course, as sailors like to have something to complain about, we grumbled constantly about how uncomfortable we were.

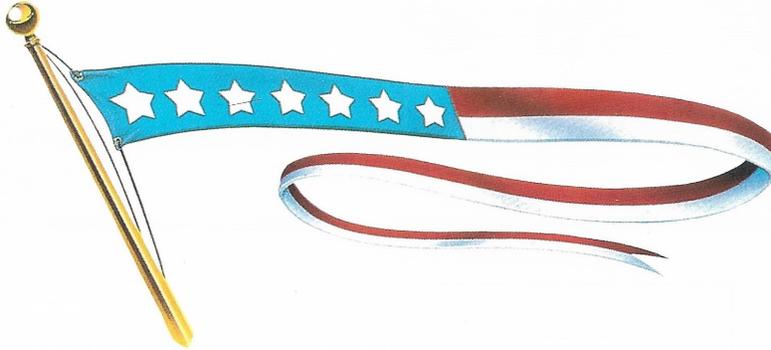

However, the next time GQ was called, we entered our Battle Dressing Station and immediately noticed that the air was much cooler and we actually had air circulating. I asked one of the corpsmen who was assigned there what happened and he replied that they had decided to actually perform the PMS on the ventilation system. What they discovered was a seriously clogged air filter in the hangar bay which was blocking the cool air from getting to us. Problem solved!

Now, in the grand scheme of things, our complaints about being hot and uncomfortable were very minor. But on the other hand,

From Commissioning to Decommissioning

"Coral Sea carries on a centuries old tradition..."

During the Middle Ages the mark of knights and other nobles was a "coach whip pennant" called a pennon. The size of these pennons as well as their diverse splendor usually signified the relative rank and importance of the noble it heralded. During the infancy of modern naval seapower these nobles rarely embarked upon seagoing vessels, but when they did, they flew their pennons from the most visible place on the ship, usually the foremast or main mast.

Perhaps the first time the commission pennant was used independent of feudal heraldry dates back to the 17th century during a conflict between the Dutch and English. Admiral Maarten Harpertzoon Tromp of the Dutch fleet hoisted a broom at his masthead to indicate his intention to "sweep the English navy from the sea."

The gesture was soon answered by British Admiral William Blake who hoisted a horse whip, to indicate his intentions to chastise the Dutch. The British carried out their boast and ever since a narrow coach whip pennant (to symbolize the original horse whip), has been the distinctive mark of a vessel of war and has been adopted by all nations.

The commissioning pennant, as it is called today, is blue at the hoist, with a union of seven white stars; it is red and white at the fly, in two horizontal stripes. (The number of stars is arbitrary). The pennant is flown at the main by vessels not carrying flag officers. In lieu of the commission pennant, a vessel with a high ranking officer or official embarked flies his own personal flag or command pennant.

Today's ceremony and its participants are enacting an age old tradition handed down from century to century. When the commissioning pennant is finally lowered from the main and handed over to the commanding officer, the ship is officially retired.

equipment should be able to operate as it was designed and constructed. A life lesson is in there somewhere, don't you think? Operating at optimal efficiency is not only good for machines but for us humans, too.

And once again, I discover that you can, in fact, teach an old dog new tricks!

God bless you and stay safe and well!

was a two-day restriction aboard the ship. Captain's Mast concluded and the Captain and I headed back to his cabin. He was chuckling all the way back. When we arrived at the Captain's Cabin, he turned to me and said he wouldn't need me for the rest of the day. So, I was free to go ashore if I wanted and would report to him after morning chow.

When I reported for duty the next day, the captain greeted me with,

"Good morning, Jim. Any reports on fading today?" We both shared a good laugh together.

It's been a long time since this tale was told and I don't recall the captain's name. However, I never forgot him as the finest commanding officer under whom, I ever served.

In the follow up with the compartment aboard the Lexington, I have not received enough pictures of Coral Sea memorabilia that you want to contribute to make an offer to the Lexington. I have been in contact with them, and they will give us as much time as needed. However, time remains important as they may not want to help out if too much time passes. So, send me any pictures of items you wish to donate. I have had one conference call with the Midway and FDR about our 2024 Three Sisters Reunion. It is too early to know details, but it is set for the last week of September. As I find out more information, I will pass it on. I plan on going to both ships' reunions this year.

Not that it matters, but I have more free time now. As of February 1, I sold all my other interests and retired. It's been a long time coming, and I hope to enjoy every minute.

That is all I have for this period, have a good day and be careful,
